x.news™ app now available in the Apple App Store

Accelerating story-centric research for journalists and content creators

Pinkafeld, Austria, 3/14/2018

Today, after much anticipation, x.news information technology is excited to announce that they have released x.news™ in the Apple App Store. The free app is available as of now for existing customers only.

The x.news™ app turns any mobile device into a cutting-edge research tool - ideal for many different types of users, from journalists, to marketing and brand analysts of large corporations and government organisations.

x.news™ app ... real-time news for professionals x.news™ transforms the way journalists and researchers go about their work by monitoring the many different information sources - all on one screen.

x.news™ handles text, video, images and audio, and can connect to a wide variety of sources as required by any individual user - from professional subscription feeds, internal systems, social media, Websites and RSS feeds.

Search results can be individually saved or shared between users. Items of interest can be collected into a workspace, ready to begin the process of writing or scripting.

With x.news™, analysts can find, follow, collect and share all the latest information to deliver up-to-date, conclusive reports – better, faster and more efficiently.
